

Recreation

Indianapolis and Cincinnati but a few hours away.

Lester A. Trier, structural engineer and architect of Elkhart, designed the Alpine Lodge, the focal point for club activities. In its colorful setting on Tamarack Mountain, the Lodge offers many attractions. Members will be afforded a wide-range view of the ski slopes through the huge picture wall of glass which forms the front of the A-shaped Lodge. The fireplace will be the biggest native stone fireplace in the mid-west, according to the designer's plans.

Tamarack Mountain Country Club members may provide their own ski equipment, or this may be obtained at the ski rental shop in the Lodge. A ski repair shop and a tog shop, showing the latest ski fashions, are to be included in the Lodge facilities, along with a snack bar.

"With the completion of Interstate 69, this part of northeastern Indiana will be the center of a vast recreational and vacation area," said Mr. Priest. "Our plans for expanded and broadened sports events and entertainment features at Tamarack Mountain are geared to the future. We hope to make this area in general, and Tamarack Mountain Country Club, in particular, a mecca for those seeking rest, relaxation, and recreation."

Through a special arrangement, charter members of Tamarack Mountain Country Club will have associate member privileges at the neighboring Eaton Springs Trout Club, Inc., operated by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Clark.

And when summer rolls around, there'll be other recreation at this year-round country club, according to plans of the developers.
