

20 Sunday, September 13, 1964 WINONA SUNDAY NEWS

Osseo Develops Pond, Recreation Area

By RUTH ROGERS
Sunday News Area Editor

OSSEO, Wis. — A pond which, when completed, will cover 8.2 acres, is the nucleus of the new recreation area of Osseo Rod & Gun Club, Inc.

It will be the largest man-made pond in Trempealeau County, according to Edward Peterson, a director of the sportsmen's group, and first one the Soil Conservation Service has designed for a club. At other clubs have been for farmers.

THE PROJECT has been growing like Topsy, and the 30 club members dream and work on to make this an all-around fun area.

They started along in 1963 by purchasing a 160-acre farm a half-mile south of Osseo on Highway 53 from the heirs of the late Theodore Thompson.

They put their neck into it to the tune of $8,000 for the land, a price which didn't include the buildings except for a deceptively house that long has been an eyesore on this apparently abandoned landscape.

In 1963 they planted 30,000 pine trees on the south part of the land adjacent to Highway 53. Here eventually they will have Christmas trees for sale. Henry Thompson district forester for Trempealeau County, is interested in this growing the heat of the summer, but are enthusiastic about their project and not worried about the debt they have incurred.

Members put a lot of work and sweat into the project during the heat of the summer, but are enthusiastic about their project and not worried about the debt they have incurred.

THE CLUB was organized before 1960, he said, and is now the oldest of its kind in Wisconsin. Although records aren't available, he said he and Arne, who had been members 40 years, and it had been in existence long before then, he claims.

Eide is the new president of the club. Einar Loken is vice president. William Paulsen Jr. is secretary. Arne Borenber, treasurer and Peterson, Adolph Baglum, Leonard Gilbert, Roy Turpen and Dean Boettcher, directors.

LA CRESCENT, Minn. (Special) — The state attorney may not represent both a municipality and a school district whose boundaries coincide, the council was told last week.

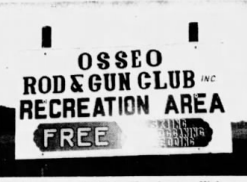

Aid Clarence Vetsch submitted an attorney general's opinion that the offices are incompatible in some circumstances.

Lloyd L. Duxbury Jr., Caladon, as a secretary, both for the school board and the village. Duxbury said he has done no work in connection with vacancies for the board and that all such matters have been usually worked out.

IN A PUBLIC hearing on a new sewer line to the high school, Edward Pittman, a resident, opposed routing the line through Spruce Drive. Myron Waldow, village engineer, said the route was necessary for proper flow. The improvement will be assessed against abutting property. Pittman, who said he will be paying for other people's improvements, will have his property exempted from the assessment, according to a motion by Aid Martin Miller.

A trial restoration of the four-way stop sign at 7th Street South and Elm Street was ordered by a 3-2 vote. Mayor William Miskler, Clerk Roger Ulrich and Aid Russell Semm voted in favor. Vetsch and Miller opposed. The action had been requested in a petition signed by many homeowners.

AN OPINION poll on floodation taken in conjunction with the November election, if it can be done at no cost to the village, aidmen decided. Mayor Miskler said a referendum on the issue is not required and that the council has authority to install the process. Duxbury suggested that later.

FOR THE FUTURE... This sign is on Highway 53. The converted farm is west of the road.

Story Hours Set at Library

Three story hours for pre-school children will be held in the children's department of the Winona Public Library.

Advance registration is required. Mrs. R. J. Williams, children's librarian, said Parents may register their children by calling in person at the children's department from 10 a.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Registrations will be accepted on a first-come first-served basis. Mrs. Williams said: She noted that mothers planning car pools should be sure their children are registered in the same story hour group.

The groups will meet Tuesdays — the first group at 9:15 a.m., the second at 10:15 a.m. and the third at 11:15 a.m. Children 3, 4 and 5 years old may be registered.

As in the past, College of St. Teresa students will assist in the story hour groups this year. They are enrolled in a class on story-telling taught by Sister M. Adriane, O.S.P. reference librarian at the college.

Assistants during the first semester will be the Misses Alice Anderson, Minneapolis; Marlene Brannock, and Elizabeth Callahan, Chicago; Catherine Camp, Arlington, Va.; Joanne Gerberbauer, Waukegan, Ill.; Bernice Gougeon, Le Roy, Ill.; Stephanie Hennel, East Rockaway, N.Y.; and Jacqueline Swezz, Decatur, Ill.

The beginning date of the Saturday story hour for older children will be announced later. Mrs. Williams said.

Osseo Creamery Officer Retires

BY WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

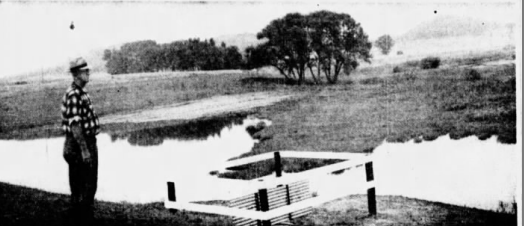

Nikita S. Khrushchev stormed the citadel of capitalism five years ago this week and probably never recovered from the experience.

By all appearances, he came to lecture and not to learn that American, as he once professed, needed a lot of good old Russian.

As it turned out, Americans didn't listen. Khrushchev did. He learned a good deal in 13 wild days of spectacular road show that left the citizenry shocked, stunned, amazed and bewildered.

On Sept. 27, Khrushchev took off for home. Often in the five years since then there has been evidence Khrushchev had seen much, learned much and taken to heart much of what he learned.

Anybody who had anything to do with Khrushchev's tour of the land of capitalism is not likely to forget it. He bubbled and paked, roared and mumbled, scowled and threatened. He produced chaos in a cow pasture in Iowa and turned a San Francisco supermarket into a shambles.

IT'LL BE THE BIGGEST... This is the start of an 8.2-acre man-made pond, biggest in Trempealeau County, according to Edward Peterson, in the picture director of the sponsoring Osseo Rod & Gun Club. The drop inlet dam, recently completed, will hold water from three springs; it will help reclaim marshland to the north, and it will drain a 400-acre Beef River watershed, in addition to forming the nucleus of a 160-acre recreation area, which once was a farm. To the left and across the background is U.S. Highway 53. (Sunday News photo)

DEER COME HERE... The woods background are a haven for the white-tails. Sometimes they are seen on the hill on which Edward Peterson, Osseo Rod and Gun Club director, stands. In the background will be a ski and toboggan slide. A target range will be against the bluff to the left, and a Bible camp among the trees to the right.

Visit to U.S. Was Turning Point for Nikita Khrushchev

By the filming of a scene from the musical "Can Can" chorus line and all.

"The face of humanity is more beautiful than its back side," snarled Khrushchev. San Francisco felt the Khrushchev storm. The Soviet premier always interested in the mystery of the U.S. consumer economy, wanted to see a supermarket. His hosts took him to one.

Suddenly the place was a madhouse. Hordes of reporters and cameramen followed him. Gary watched his corn being trampled and reared indignantly. Happily, Khrushchev had loved "Turn the bulls loose of them."

OH, SEEN Khrushchev to Pittsburgh took a cigar from a factory worker and gave the man his wrist watch in exchange. Then it was on to Camp David. President Eisenhower's Maryland retreat for the most solemn moments of the four.

The two most powerful leaders in the world met atop the most-eroded mountain and discussed their differences. The "spirit of Camp David" was born only to fade away eight months later when Khrushchev left the abortive Paris summit meeting, denounced Eisenhower as a "fake friend" because of the U-2 plane incident.

Khrushchev, instantly furious about corn, was inspecting the field. Swarms of journalists and cameramen followed him. Gary watched his corn being trampled and reared indignantly. Happily, Khrushchev had loved "Turn the bulls loose of them."

OH, SEEN Khrushchev to Pittsburgh took a cigar from a factory worker and gave the man his wrist watch in exchange. Then it was on to Camp David. President Eisenhower's Maryland retreat for the most solemn moments of the four.

The two most powerful leaders in the world met atop the most-eroded mountain and discussed their differences. The "spirit of Camp David" was born only to fade away eight months later when Khrushchev left the abortive Paris summit meeting, denounced Eisenhower as a "fake friend" because of the U-2 plane incident.

Then it was off to Good Hope for a 200-odd time at the farm of Russell Garst. There was a nice, pleasant, honey lunch and there was chess in the curtilage.

"It took me only 12 hours to get here and perhaps it would take less time to get back," he growled. Americans simply wouldn't understand that when he said "here" he meant only

9- NEW 1964 PO To Be Sold CON ● The Finest Pontiac ● Many Models to Choose From ● Low Mileage Per Month